

Contributors

Veronika Bilger has studied African Studies with a focus on migration at the universities of Vienna and Naples. She is a researcher at the ICMPD (International Centre for Migration Policy Development) in Vienna and lecturer at the University of Vienna. Contact: Veronika.Bilger@icmpd.org

Florence Boyer holds a doctorate in geography. She is associated with the Maison des Sciences de l'Homme et de la Société in Poitiers. Her recently completed thesis is on Touareg circular migration from Bankilaré (Niger) to Abidjan. Contact: florence.boyer@mshs.univ-poitiers.fr

Julien Brachet is currently working on a Ph.D. in social sciences on forms of mobility in the central Sahara at the Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne (UMR Prodig) and the Institut de Recherche pour le Développement (UR 105). Contact: julienbrachet@no-log.org

Ibrahima Amadou Dia graduated in Sociology at the University of St. Louis, Senegal. He is currently doing his Ph.D. at the Institute of Development Studies of the University of Geneva. Contact: ibadia@bluewin.ch

Adama Konseiga is visiting fellow at the Center for Development Research (ZEF) at the University of Bonn (Germany). His research interests are regional integration, international migration, household economics, food security and economic convergence. Contact: akonseiga@yahoo.com

Albert Kraler holds a degree in Political Sciences and African Studies from the University of Vienna. He is a researcher at the ICMPD (International Centre for Migration Policy Development) in Vienna and lecturer at the University of Vienna. Contact: Albert.Kraler@univie.ac.at

Axel Kreienbrink graduated in History and Political Science. In 2004, he completed his Ph.D. on the implications of the transformation of Spain from a country of emigration to a country of immigration. Currently, he is researcher at the German Federal Office for Migration and Refugees in Nuremberg. Contact: akreienbrink@gmx.de

Laurence Marfaing is researcher at the Centre for Modern Oriental Studies (Zentrum Moderner Orient, www.zmo.de) in Berlin. She is currently working on a project on Senegalese migrants in Mauritania and Morocco. Contact: Laurence.Marfaing@rz.hu-berlin.de

Susana Pereira Bastos holds a Ph.D. from the Universidade Nova de Lisboa. She is associate professor at the Department of Anthropology and member of SociNova, a research centre on migration at the same university. Contact: bsst@fcsb.unl.pt

Vanessa Prinz holds a degree in Communication Studies/African Studies and Sociology/International Development from the University of Vienna. Her research interests are African migration and social implications of migration to Europe. Contact: vanessa_prinz@yahoo.com

Bruno Riccio is researcher and lecturer at the Department of Cultural Anthropology of the University of Bologna, Italy. He has worked and published on Senegalese migrants and the Italian experience of immigration. Contact: bcsriccio@libero.it

Egide Rwamatwara holds a MPhil degree in Race and Ethnic Relations from the University of Zimbabwe and a Masters Degree in Humanitarian Action from the University of Geneva. He is a Ph.D. student in Sociology at the University of Zimbabwe doing research on survival strategies among refugees in Africa. Contact: rwameg@hotmail.com

Corrado Tornimbeni has studied at the University of Bologna (Italy) and at SOAS London (UK) and holds a Ph.D. from the University of Cagliari (Italy). He is a research associate at the Department of Portuguese and Brazilian Studies, King's College London and a Post-Doctoral Fellow at Dip. di Politica, Istituzioni, Storia, University of Bologna. Contact: corrado.trn@tiscali.it

Helene Trauner graduated in social anthropology. She is a researcher at the ZSI (Centre for Social Innovation) in Vienna. Her research interests are migration and migration policies: anti-discrimination, labour market, integration and ethnic minorities. Contact: trauner@zsi.at