

Authors

Barbara Gärber holds a master degree in international development studies and is currently pursuing her Ph.D. at the Department of African Studies at the University of Vienna. Her Ph.D. thesis focuses on the impact of increasing sedentarization on land and livestock rights of agro-pastoral women and men in Karamoja, Uganda.

Email: barbara.gaerber@hotmail.com

Ndèye Ndiagna Gning, PhD in medical anthropology, is working on the issue of discourse on homosexuality in public spaces and experiences of men who have multiple sexual identities in the context of AIDS in Senegal.

Email: gnagna.gning@gmail.com

Tirhas T. Habtu holds PhD (G. Distinction) in African Studies from the University of Vienna; Master of Advanced International Studies Degree from the Diplomatic Academy of Vienna. Graduate Diploma in International Studies from the Bologna Center of the Johns Hopkins University, Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies. A Bachelor's Degree (G. Distinction) in Political Science from the University of Asmara, Eritrea, where she worked as a research and teaching assistant from 2004 to 2006, and as a public relations staff member from 2003 to 2004.

Email: tirhas79@gmail.com

Paul Swanepoel is currently a lecturer in the School of Law, University of KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa. He read for a PhD in colonial legal history at the University of Edinburgh and his research interests include colonial law and constitutional history in East Africa.

Email: Swanepoelp@ukzn.ac.za