

AutorInnen / Authors

Dr. Svetlana BOLTOVSKAJA ist wissenschaftliche Mitarbeiterin am Herder-Institut für historische Ostmitteleuropa Forschung in Marburg (Projekte „Das ukrainische Polesien als Nuklearlandschaft und die Transformationen lokaler Identitäten, 1965-2015“, „Digitale Forschungsinfrastruktur: Das Kulturerbe Polesiens“). 2013 promovierte sie in Freiburg zum Thema „Bildungsmigranten aus dem subsaharischen Afrika in Moskau und St. Petersburg: Selbst- und Fremdbilder“. Sie ist Ethnologin, Journalistin und Museologin. Ihre Forschungsschwerpunkte sind die Geschichte der Bildungsmigration aus Afrika nach Russland, interethnische und kulturelle Beziehungen zwischen Afrika und Osteuropa, Geschichte und Kultur der ethnischen Minderheiten in Osteuropa, transnationale Migration, Identitätsbildung, Selbst- und Fremdwahrnehmung.

E-Mail: svetlana.boltovskaja@herder-institut.de, boltovsk@gmx.net

Atuswege BURTON ist Dozentin für Kiswahili am Institut für Afrikawissenschaften an der Universität Wien. Sie hat einen Studienabschluss in Kulturanthropologie und Tourismus von der Tumaini University, Iringa (Tansania).

E-Mail: atuswege.burton@univie.ac.at

Eric BURTON is a postdoctoral research associate in the project ‘Socialism goes global,’ University of Exeter. He specialises in the entangled histories of development, socialisms and anticolonial liberation struggles with a focus on Tanzania and the two German states. Previously, he was a Leibniz EEGA Science Campus guest scholar at Leipzig University and pre-doc researcher and lecturer at the University of Vienna in African Studies, Development Studies and History. Current publications related to this special issue include the edited volume ‘Socialisms in Development,’ Journal für Entwicklungspolitik (Austrian Journal of Development Studies) Vol. 33, no. 3 (2017) and the journal article “Navigating global socialism: Tanzanian students in and beyond East Germany”, Cold War History (forthcoming).

E-mail: eric.burton@univie.ac.at, ericburton227@gmail.com

Immanuel R. HARISCH ist ab Herbst 2018 als Doktorand in der Forschungsplattform „Mobile Kulturen und Gesellschaften“ an der Universität Wien tätig. In seiner Dissertation beschäftigt er sich mit den Bildungswegen afrikanischer GewerkschafterInnen in „Ost“, „Süd“ und „West“ zu Zeiten der internationalen Systemkonkurrenz. Masterstudium der Internationalen Entwicklung und Afrikawissenschaften an der Universität Wien, Auslandssemester und Forschungsaufenthalte an der Universität Dar es Salaam. Derzeitiges Forschungsinteresse: Gewerkschaftsgeschichte, DDR-Afrikapolitik, Sozialismen in Afrika, Historische Wissensproduktion an der Universität Dar es Salaam.

E-Mail: immanuel.harisch@gmail.com

Ismay MILFORD is a PhD candidate in the department of History and Civilization at the European University Institute, Florence. Her thesis explores the work and intellectual output of a generation of anticolonial activists from Uganda, Tanzania, Malawi and Zambia, who sought to forge contacts beyond the borders of their respective colonial territories, during the period 1952-64. This fits within a broader project of mapping the history of anticolonial thought and its relationship to narratives of decolonisation.

E-mail: Ismay.Milford@EUI.eu

Marcia C. SCHENCK received her PhD in history at Princeton University (September 2017). Her dissertation is titled Socialist Solidarities and their Aftermath: Histories and Memories of Angolan and Mozambican migrants to the German Democratic Republic, 1975-2015. Currently, she is a fellow of the International Research Center for Work and Human Lifecycle in Global History, re:work, at the Humboldt University, Berlin. She published in African Economic History, Labor History, and Atelier and has work forthcoming in Africa. Her research interests include migration history, African history, global history, history of international organizations, micro history, and oral history.

E-mail: schenmar@hu-berlin.de

Dr. Nadine SIEGERT is a researcher, curator and publisher with a focus on modern and contemporary arts of the Global South. Currently she is the Deputy Director of Iwalewahaus, University of Bayreuth and member of the research project Revolution 3.0 at the Bayreuth Academy of Advanced African Studies. She was a Brooks International Fellow at Tate Modern and Delfina Foundation in 2018 and Curator in Residence at Vila Sul, Goethe-Institute in Salvador de Bahia in 2017. She teaches modern and contemporary African arts and curatorial studies at the University of Bayreuth and curated a number of exhibitions such as Feedback: Art, Africa and the 1980 (2018) and FAVT: Future Africa Visions in Time (since 2016). Her current research project is on socialist aesthetic modernity in Africa.

E-mail: nadine.siegert@uni-bayreuth.de

Dr. Tal ZALMANOVICH is a postdoctoral fellow at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in the ERC funded project APARTHEID-STOPS that studies the transnational circulation of anti-apartheid expressive culture. She is an historian of media, and has published in Postcolonial Studies and in the Journal of British Studies. She currently has work in press with the journals Safundi and Critical Arts. She is a podcast host at the New Books Network.

E-mail: tal.zalmanovich@mail.huji.ac.il