

TOWARDS A DECOLONIZATION OF KNOWLEDGE

by

Akachi Ezeigbo

Women of my land, adjust your wrappers, retune your minds,
Your hearth blooms with ashes long gone cold
Rekindle the fire, the passion for an inclusive future,
Redefine yourselves and acquire new knowledge.
New days witness new dawns as you strive for equity and balance
To inscribe your knowledge amidst global knowledge.
Go, tell it to the watching women, freedom storms the cage
To liberate the caged birds longing for untrammelled flights,
Give women a voice and the will to act and prevail,
Dismantle patriarchy and open doors for social and cultural redirection.